

Date	What do you think is working for you as a student? What do you like about the course structure, the content, and my teaching style? In other words, what would you keep the same?	What do you think isn't working for you in terms of the course structure, the contents, and as far as my teaching style is concerned? In other words, what other changes would you make?	What other thoughts do you want to share with me?
	Open-Ended Response	Open-Ended Response	Open-Ended Response
11/23/2009 18:34	I really like the involvement of the instructor. I also really like that she allows revisions so we fully understand what is going on.	I really cannot say right now. When I get stuck I ask a question and I figure it out with the teachers help.	NA
11/23/2009 2:54	I like that each week's assignment builds upon each other. I like the feedback as well.	I have difficulty with DQs that to me are factual. It is hard to have a discussion when there is no "contention" on the topic.	I love the feedback and the constructio criticism.
11/22/2009 20:55	I like how you split the tasks up into manageable sections. I also really like how you make yourself available to us throughout the week. Your insight is what we are paying for. I really like your style.	I wouldn't change anything. The only thing I can see is maybe some students who do not meet deadlines are not having to pay a penalty for not doing so. I don't know though because I do not see the other students grades. I think it is very nice of you to give some credit for late work. Some instructors give 0 credit for missed deadlines.	Thank you for taking the time to teach others your craft. Thank you for passing along your knowledge. People like you make such a huge difference in the lives of others. You may not be able to see it, but it is happening. Thank you :)

Date	What do you think is working for you as a student? What do you like about the course structure, the content, and my teaching style? In other words, what would you keep the same?	What do you think isn't working for you in terms of the course structure, the contents, and as far as my teaching style is concerned? In other words, what other changes would you make?	What other thoughts do you want to share with me?
	Open-Ended Response	Open-Ended Response	Open-Ended Response
11/17/2009 15:37	I like how interactive you are in both the individual project, group project and in the main. That helps keep students engaged. I like how the projects are paced over the weeks rather than just being due at the end. I like the Miner and Miner book and the resources you provide to supplement. They are helpful. I like that the DQ is due early. In my other class this term it isn't due until Sunday so it's hard to get a conversation going. I also like that you add supplemental ones when things get quiet. I also like that you require verifiable statements in posts. It may sound rude, but I want an education based on quality. I get tired of reading other peoples opinions. If I want that, I'll turn on the TV. :) I like that you are able to have fun with the class. I like that we can revise our work. Not just for the grade, but I think we learn more that way. Often, I would submit papers, and they would just give me a grade and no feedback. That's not terribly helpful.	I don't care for the Barber book. It's very awkwardly worded and is filled with confusing typos and phrasing. I've wondered a few times if the author is a native English speaker or not. The group project isn't going very well. I realize they have applications, but when group members don't work well with others, it makes so much more work and takes away from the whole purpose. It's just so much of a gamble and so many have bad experiences, do the good ones really outweigh the bad ones?	This is my one and only class in this program. I am in the MBA program. The quality of the students in this class is great. Other than the group project, I am very much enjoying this class.

Date	What do you think is working for you as a student? What do you like about the course structure, the content, and my teaching style? In other words, what would you keep the same?	What do you think isn't working for you in terms of the course structure, the contents, and as far as my teaching style is concerned? In other words, what other changes would you make?	What other thoughts do you want to share with me?
	Open-Ended Response	Open-Ended Response	Open-Ended Response
11/17/2009 13:07	I think the syllabus is informative and well planned, despite the changes.	Too much discussion about nothing. We are struggling to meet requirements of additional postings with material that is course related...maybe back off to 2?....Honestly, the group project is a waste of time...my or our time would be better spent really getting a handle on the individual project and how to do it right...its so valuable a tool....and we are sidetracked with a group project that in my mind is a waste of time. Also, the rule that you can't comment or post on someone who already has a posted comment until everyone has at least 1 post is a problem...we have a few people always right at limit or late with posts and it holds up those of us who need to post and move on...can we change that?	I love your style..your feedback..your organization and your concern for the student actually learning and applying the subject....not focusing on grades, more on learning the material and understanding it. It is a refreshing change compared to most of my other instructors and I thank you.
11/16/2009 21:14	I really do enjoy your structure and teaching style. What you offer is like an open door policy. I would keep everything except all of the overwhelming materials. I was and still am overwhelmed with the syllabus and it really takes time to read each and I don't have any suggestions or recommendations on how to do differently.	At this time I think things are working it is as a student you have to really pay attention to detail which happens to be a lot of materials to assort through and read.	I really do like your teaching style. You have a great sense of humor which is very much needed when working under stress. In my opinion, this course is online but whenever we have a question you seem to come with a very quick response, and very assessable.

Date	What do you think is working for you as a student? What do you like about the course structure, the content, and my teaching style? In other words, what would you keep the same?	What do you think isn't working for you in terms of the course structure, the contents, and as far as my teaching style is concerned? In other words, what other changes would you make?	What other thoughts do you want to share with me?
	Open-Ended Response	Open-Ended Response	Open-Ended Response
11/16/2009 6:26	I am enjoying the participation from my classmates and the feedback from Dr. Chanley. The atmosphere and learning environment is awesome.	The course is very difficult to follow and understand due to the amount of material that is being presented and expected that we know and follow. I am truly having a difficult time in following the syllabus because of the amount of information, paperwork, attachments etc.	I really like your teaching style- meaning how approachable that you are; how knowledgeable that you are; how empathetic that you are regarding the students needs and expectations. It is very tough to "critique" this course because you are such a sound, kind and intelligent instructor.